EN ROUTE HOME FROM EUROPE

WITH THE 28TH INFANTRY
DIVISION IN ASSEMBLY AREA
COMMAND.—S. Sgt. Ulrich L. Burger of Dunlay, Texas, is en route home from the European theater of operations with the veteran "Bloody Bucket" Division, which in eight months saw vicious combat action from Normandy's hedgerows to the heart of the Reich.

The 28th quit its occupational duties in Germany July 5 and moved to Camp Pittsburg, one of Assembly Area Command's 17 redeployment camps near Reims.

Entering action July 30, 1944, at St. Lo, the "Bloody Bucket" men battled across Normandy, paraded through Paris, proceeded east through Belgium and Luxembourg, and smashed into the Siegfried Line
Sept. 11—the first troops to enter Germany in strength.

After its November fight in Hurtgen Forest, the 28th moved to the "quiet" Luxembourg sector. On Dec.
16, it caught the full force of Von Rundstedt's Ardennes offensive.
Quickly recuperating, the 28th then moved south to help liberate Colmar in Alsace and drive to the Rhine.
Within a month, it was again at the Rhine near Coblenz.

S. Sgt. Burger is the son of Mr.
and Mrs. Wm. Burger of Dunlay, Texas.

He holds the following decorations: Combat Infantry Badge, ETO Ribbon with five stars, and Unit Citation for meritorious service.

ONE-WAY STREETS STYMIE SOLDIER IN STOLEN TRUCK

One-way streets will probably become the "pet peeve" of a negro soldier driving a pickup truck. Stopped by Joe Morales, police investigator, on the 300 block of W. Commerce St. Thursday at 3 a. m., the soldier's troubles began when he failed to satisfy Morales. Upon further investigation it was found that the man had stolen the truck and two rifles found in the vehicle. The truck was returned to R. C. Talley of Hondo, who reported the truck was taken from a downtown street in that town. The negro was then turned over to military police—and all because of San Antonio's one-way streets.—San Antonio Express.

NEWS NOTES

From The Flight Engineer School

Issued by the Public Relations Office, AAFES, Hondo, Texas.

PCST OBSERVES AIR FORCE DAY

Approximately 2,500 civilian visitors from Hondo and other Medina County communities joined with Hondo Army Air Field personnel
last Wednesday to observe Air Force Day, the 38th birthday of America's fighting air arm.

Following a morning gathering of all civilians at the Post Theater, where Commanding Officer Col.
Robert B. Laverport welcomed them to the B-29 Flight Engineer School, spectators were directed to the west ramp to view a formal military inspection and review. Highlight of the review was the awarding of combat decorations to four AAF officers.

The Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal were presented to First Lt. L. B. Hakes of Coronado, Calif., veteran navigator of the China-Burma-India theater.

Three other navigator officers received the DFC. They were: First Lt. Roy D. Bunch, Mediterranean
theater; First Lt. Jack J. Shuman, Mediterranean theater, and First Lt.
E. J. Murray, European theater.

The On-The-Line Cadet squadron demonstrated the best marching appearance for participating groups in the review.

Three B-24 Liberator trainers were made available for inspection to the visitors following the military ceremonies on the west ramp. Second only to the big bombers for crowd appeal was a demonstration by Flight Officer Seymour M. Rosencrans, Hondo Field flight engineer, who lectured on the "tick-tock"
trainer.

The trainer is a mechanical reproduction of the B-29's flight engineer instrument panel, and is the only one of its type used by the AAF to give cadets ground school instruction in Superfortress flight engineer problems.

Demonstrations of clothing and equipment, use of overwater emergency equipment, athletic events, and entertainment features at the Post Theater rounded out the "Know
Your Air Force" activities at Hondo
Field.

First Lt. Robert Bush of Dallas, Texas, returned combat navigator, annexed the spotlight during swimming contests at the post pool by giving a spur-of-the-moment underwater swimming demonstration with hands and feet tied with ropes.

Bush, former Texas University cheer leader and acrobat, is billeting officer on the field.

Hondo Chamber of Commerce officials who represented their city during the celebration at the post were Bill Windrow, Hondo Chamber of Commerce president, Bob Koll-man, military affairs committeeman, and Rudy Rath, manager of the organization.

NEW BUS SCHEDULES

New bus schedules between Hondo and Hondo Field became effective Aug. 1. The post exchange bus will leave Hondo at 6 a. m. daily.
Thereafter a continuous half-hour schedule will be maintained until 11:45 p. m., when the last bus embarks for the post.

Present rout of the bus is from Hondo to the south gate, around to the east gate, through the Cadet area, by the Post Theater, Line Caf-ee Shop and enlisted men's mess hall, to the motor pool, then back to the south gate and return to Hondo.

The bus travels from town to the Post Theater in approximately 15 minutes.

HONDO OFFICER BOWLING LEAGUE LEADER

Major A. R. Ricketts, Hondo Field post finance officer, was elected vice president of the San Antonio Service Bowling league Monday night when the league was reorganized.

Lt. Col. John Reed of the Army
Air Forces Personnel Distribution Center was elected president, and Warrant Officer Charles Truder of Brooks Field was renamed secretary and treasurer.

Reorganization was accomplished at a victory celebration marking the end of the first half of the season.
It was decided to divide the 22 teams into two leagues of 10 and 12 teams.
Tentative plans place Hondo Field in the 12-team loop. The schedule calls for 11 weeks' competition, and will be conducted on a handicap basis.

DON'T MEET RETURNEES AT PORTS, PEOPLE URGED

Relatives and friends of servicemen returning from overseas are urged by the War Department not to attempt to meet them at ports of debarkation.

Ports and staging areas are restricted and there is no way of communicating with returnees at these installations. There are little or no housing facilities in nearby cities.
The men are on their way to reception stations nearest their homes within 24 to 28 hours after arrival.

Transportation facilities are overcrowded.

Any interference with processing will only lengthen the time before the men can be furloughed, the War Department announcement added.

NEW DANCE BAND TAKING SHAPE AT HONDO FIELD

A Special Service orchestra of 10 to 12 instruments is being organized and expects to make its debut soon.
Rehearsals have been underway for several days, but the finishing touches have yet to be added preparatory to making a formal appearance.

Some of the orchestra members have been associated with other musical units appearing at various occasions recently, but others are personnel who have been stationed at Hondo Field only a short time.
All rehearsals and engagements take place during after-noon hours.

HONDO MERCHANTS CLOSE TO OBSERVE AIR FORCE DAY

The city of Hondo joined in an Air Force Day observance to which the nation as a whole devoted a great deal of attention, including radio broadcasts, banquets, dinners, such features as newspaper stories, and speeches highlighted by the radio talk of Gen. H. H. Arnold, Air Forces chief.

The event was in accord with President Truman's proclamation, and a subsequent proclamation was issued for Hondo by Mayor John A.
Hogger. The merchants of the town closed their doors for the day to pay tribute to the Army Air Forces, and many of them and their families attended special activities at Hondo Field.

Virtually all AAF installation in the United States celebrated the 38th anniversary of the Air Forces, which organization started with one captain and two enlisted men and expanded to a peak personnel of more than 2,300,000 officers and men. The organization has dropped more than 2,000,000 tons of bombs on the enemy.

AAF'S NEWEST BOMBER, B-32, NOW IN USE IN PACIFIC

The B-32, newest of the Army Air Forces' big bombers, is now seeing action against the Japanese, with
Gen. George C. Kenney's Far East Air Forces, the War Department announced this week.

Featuring heavy firepower and bomb load, the B-32 was designed especially for operations in the Pacific.
Certain details are not yet available, but it is known to carry sizeable bomb loads for long distances at speeds exceeding 300 miles per hour.
It is not pressurized like a B-29, but can carry larger bombs because of longer single bomb bay doors.

It is an all-metal, high wing, single tail monoplane with a cylindrical, semi-monocoque fuselage, a tricycle landing gear which uses dual tires.
It is powered by four double-row 18-cylinder Wright Cyclone engines of 2,200 horsepower, each equipped with two exhaust-driven turbo-super-chargers. Curtiss four-bladed propellers have a diameter of 16 feet, 8 inches. Propellers on the two inboard engines have reversible pitch blades for braking during the landing run.

Developed by Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation, in cooperation with the Air Technical Service Command, the B-32 has a wing span of 135 feet and a length of 83 feet,
1 inch and a height of 32 feet, 2 inches. It has a gross weight of 100,000 pounds. Overloaded it will weigh 120,000 pounds; empty, more than 60,000 pounds. Since last May, limited production has continued at the company's Fort Worth plant.
Transition training for B-32 crew members is being provided at Fort Worth Army Air Field.

HAAF GRADUATES ITS SECOND FLIGHT ENGINEER CLASS

Flight Engineer training is underway at a break-neck pace at Hondo Field, with the second cadet class graduated this week just one week after the nation's first cadet class of B-29 Flight Engineers received the newly-designed AAF wings and commissions of second lieutenants or flight officer appointments.

The new officers leave Hondo, except the few retained as instructors, for transitional training schools to join other officer members of the Superfortress combat crew preparatory to joining the B-29 fleet hitting Japanese cities from the skies in a regular pattern.

these meetings. Any new members will be welcomed.

BROTHERS MEET IN GERMANY

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Klein of this city received word from their sons,
Pfc. Henry F. Klein and Sgt. Elvin
A. Klein, that they met recently in Stuttgart, Germany. They had not seen each other since April, 1943, while they were both stationed in California. Needless to say, that they were very happy to be together once again, after having been separated so long. Henry is with Division Hq. of the 100th Infantry and Elvin is with the Ninth Air Force.
Elvin wrote of a very narrow escape which he had recently. While out on a plane crash job, three crashed in a field in about three feet of water, caused by the flooding of the Roer River in Germany, he took the parachute out of the plane and tossed it out to the edge of the water in the direction he was going to make his exit on finishing his work.
The chute landed on an anti-personnel mine and was blown up. Luckily none of the four men was hurt, although the fragments whizzed past them.

Adding to destruction of Japanese cities, Superfortresses drop bevy of 70-pound incendiaries over target.

PACIFIC:
Peace Talk

First heard after Germany's collapse, Jap peace talk gained momentum at the Big Three conference in Berlin, with the latest impetus provided by the statement of Senator Wherry (Rep., Neb.) that a high military source had informed him that President Truman had been asked to outline specific surrender terms to bring about a cessation of hostilities.

Though Wherry did not reveal the identity of the persons involved, it was recalled that Capt. E. M. Zacharias of the U. S. navy in broadcasting an appeal to Japanese leaders to give up the fight, had declared that influential people in the U. S. hoped to avert the destruction of the enemy.

Speaking for the government, Zacharias sought to assure the enemy's military hierarchy that surrender had precedent in history as an honorable means of realistically accepting defeat, and that the alternative to quitting now and enjoying the self-determination of the Atlantic charter was prolongation of the struggle and national annihilation.

According to Wherry, the appeal to President Truman to "stop the slaughter of American boys and Japanese civilians" was couched in a letter urging him to assure the Nipponese that after unconditional surrender the integrity of the emperor would be preserved and he would be permitted to organize a government satisfactory to the U. S. Further, Jap social and religious freedoms would be respected.

While the letter stated that military occupation was not considered necessary, an Allied commission would supervise destruction of war industry. In conformance with the Cairo declaration, the letter said, the enemy should be compelled to give up Manchuria, Korea and Formosa and withdraw from other Asiatic and Pacific conquests.

Meanwhile, the Big Three meet in Berlin pointed up the peace talk, with Premier Stalin reportedly bearing Jap terms to the conference, and President Truman supposedly carrying surrender conditions demanding disbandment of Jap forces, relinquishment of Manchuria, Korea, Formosa and other conquests, and Allied supervision over enemy industry, shipbuilding and ports.

SENATE:

Speed Charter

Having hurried passage of the Bretton Woods monetary agreements and increased lending power of the Export-Import bank to aid postwar reconstruction and world trade, the senate moved just as speedily in ratifying the United Nations security charter.

The real battle over the charter was expected to develop later, when the senate worked out details concerning the U. S. delegate's power to order American armed forces into action, and the size of this country's contributions to the international organization's military establishment.

Along with Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.), Senator Connally (Dem., Texas) led the opening discussions for passage, declaring that while the charter was no guarantee against war, it provides the machinery for the settlement of differences among the major powers capable of conducting hostilities. Availing the charter set up no super-state, Vandenberg argued that it preserved U. S. self-determination, permitting peaceful solution of global disputes.

EXPORT HORSES:

For Europe

Arrangements have been completed for the exporting of small horses of draft type to countries of southern Europe, with experienced dealers in the United States handling the purchases. A farmer will sell to the horse buyer in the usual way.

Mares are wanted, three to eight years old, from 13½ to 15½ hands high at the withers, of stocky conformation suitable for draft purposes.

FRANCE:

Historic Drama

Attired in a dress uniform of a marshal with seven stars on each sleeve, and wearing a single bronze military medal on a yellow and green ribbon, Marshal Henri Petain faced a French court on a charge of high treason in a trial that threatened to split the already war-torn country.

Famed as prosecutor of World War I spy, Mata Hari, aged Andre Morne directed the state's case, accusing the marshal of plotting against the republic; abandoning Indo-China to the Japs; supplying Axis armies; contributing to the German war machine by furnishing French material and manpower; ordering the scuttling of the country's fleet, and opposing Allied North African landings.

Standing before a jury made up of former liberation leaders and pre-war parliamentarians, Petain stoutly declared:

"I remained the head of the country under occupation. Can you understand the difficulty of a government in such conditions? I had a dagger at my throat every day. I fought the demands of the enemy. . . . While General De Gaulle pursued the struggle beyond the borders, I prepared the way for liberation by preserving a sorrowing but living France. . . ."

While Petain claimed to have negotiated the armistice after consultations with French military leaders, former Premier Paul Reynaud charged him with being responsible for cessation of hostilities despite a solemn pact with Britain not to make a separate peace.

HOME FRONT:

Ease Pinch

Due to cutbacks in army procurement, increased supplies of both meat and shoes are in the offing.

Though pork stocks will continue to remain tight, more beef, veal and lamb are expected to reach butchers' counters, with point reductions scheduled for August. Reflecting the increased supplies to civilians, federally inspected packers have been ordered to set aside but 25 per cent of their army-style beef in comparison with previous allotments of 65 per cent.

At the same time, it was reported that with the government's claiming most of the record holdings of 261 million pounds of beef in storage July 1, army purchases have slowed in recent weeks, adding to potential civilian supplies.

Because the army has cut purchase of combat and tropical boots and service and lend-lease shoes by 1½ million pairs monthly, almost 8 million feet of upper leather and an equal amount of sole leather have become available every month for civilian production.

As a result, 4 million more ration type shoes may be manufactured monthly, the trade predicted, with the increased stocks posing the question of easing rationing regulations. Because retailers' inventories of ration-type shoes are at a low point and they have substantial quantities of the non-rationed brand on hand, however, the government is expected to move slowly before loosening restrictions to prevent demand to surpass supply and leave merchants stuck with the wartime models.

SPORTS SALES

A digest of the 1939 census of manufacturers conducted by the bureau of the census reveals that sporting arms and ammunition and equipment for hunting and shooting accounted for approximately 39 per cent of the expenditures made by the American public for sporting equipment. Expenditure for all sports equipment was $121,855,304 at manufacturers' prices.

Radar Magical Beam That

Lightning Calculator Estimates Distances
Upon Deflection of Electrons; Study

(In a previous article Mr. Baukhage told some of the little known facts in the history and development of radar and recorded many of its possible peacetime uses. In this article he explains what makes radar tick and how it performed some of its marvelous feats in this war.)

"Impact," a publication of the office of the assistant chief of air staff, intelligence branch, for the first time lifting the veil which has covered descriptions of radar, says succinctly: "A radar set is nothing more than a machine for sending electrons out into space in a steady stream in a desired direction. These electrons travel with the speed of light in a straight line until their energy is dissipated, or unless they bump into something."

That bump is important. If a stream of electrons is shot into the air like a searchlight and a plane flies across the stream, the electrons which hit the plane bounce back. They bounce right back to a screen in the radar scope and are revealed in the form of a "blip" of light, just as an echo bounding back on your eardrum is reflected in the form of a sound.

The principle of the real echo is used in "sonic" location of obstacles—ships use it to locate shoals, for instance. And, recently, it has been demonstrated that bats use the same principle in avoiding obstacles (which they can't see since they are blind) by uttering a tiny "beep," the pitch of which is probably too high for the human ear to catch. Their beep bounces back in time to warn them to duck.

But radar's electronic "blip" is better than a sonic "beep." One reason is that an electron moves with the speed of light which is faster than sound.

'Echo' Caught

On Radar Receiver

Perhaps at this point we ought to recall to your minds what an electron is. A short definition of an electron is "the most elementary charge of negative electricity." Electrons plus protons (the positive charge) are what atoms are made of and atoms are what molecules are made of and you and I and the universe and all it contains are, as we learned in high school, nothing but various groups of molecules.

Ordinarily electrons pursue the even, if rapid, tenor of their ways well within the bounds of their own atoms. But radar has changed all that. It has made it possible to project those electrons out into space and then, if they hit something and bounce back, to catch the "echo" on the "scope" of the radar set in the form of a "blip" or blob of light.

We can't go into detail as to how this operation takes place, but we can tell you in a general way. The scope of the radar set is round. It is like a map. North at the top, south at the bottom; east to the right and west to the left. So that you will know where you are a little light appears on the screen just where your set is located on the "map" you are looking at. By moving the instrument, you can keep yourself in the middle. If you see another spot of light on the screen up where 12 o'clock would be on your watch dial, you know there is a plane (or other object) north of you. If it should be a plane and it were coming toward you (which the instrument would reveal) and it finally appeared right on top of the light that showed your location, you'd know that there was going to be a collision.

Radar can "see" a ship 30 miles away—and see it in the dark, through a wall of cloud or mist, which no human sight could penetrate.

Different substances give stronger or weaker "echoes" on your screen, water little or none. Land more, built-up areas more than fields. Rocks more than softer surfaces.

In addition to locating an object in relation to the observer (the location of the radar set), the distance from the object can be calculated by the length of time it takes for the electrons to reach the object and bounce back. (The elevation (angle of height from observer) and the deflection (how far to the right or left) are calculated just as a survivor makes these calculations by observation from two known points. And you don't have to be an engineer to do it either—it is done automatically by a lightning calculator.

I have stood in awe before these calculating machines, which can "think" more accurately and a thousand times faster than I could figure, and watched how they direct the aim of the turret, waist and tail guns on a B-29.

As I said in last week's article, the enemy has radar, too. The Germans were working on it with investigation and experiment which paralleled ours and those of the British. In the early days of the war the Germans had receiving sets on high hills along the coast of France. The electron beam, like that of television, moves in a straight line and since the surface of the earth is curved, this curve gets in the way if the image and receiving set are too far apart. Therefore, land sets are placed as high in the air as possible.

We knew that the Germans had some kind of an electronic device and they knew we had one. One of the early commando raids, which the papers said was successful in destroying a German "radio station," really destroyed the radar installation.

Poke Out

Japs' Eyes'

One of the reasons why Iwo Jima and Okinawa were so important, besides the fact that they make excellent naval and air bases, is because the Japs had their radar detection stations on these islands and were able to detect the presence of our bombers and intercept their flight. You will also recall that a number of little adjacent islands that hardly seemed of any importance were seized by our troops. In all probability it was because they had radar installations which could detect and give warning of planes leaving the larger island for Japan. As we put out her "eyes" one after another, Japan becomes more impotent. There have been many cases, you may have noticed, where the Japs, on land or on small ships, have been taken by surprise. I have no information on this subject, but in some cases it may have been due to the fact that they lacked radar equipment. It is believed that what radar knowledge Japan has come from the Germans.

Of course, there is one phase of radar detection which in the past has sometimes prevented use of data concerning the detection of a plane or ship. That is the fact that until the object is very close it cannot be identified. It is merely a "blip" of light. Therefore, it is impossible to tell friend and enemy apart. Some sort of identification has been developed, details of which are still, I believe, "top secret."

An example of how this worked to the disadvantage of the British was in the engagement in which HMS Hood was lost. On May 21, 1941, the Hood was lying in the strait between Iceland and Greenland when suddenly out of nowhere she was hit by a salvo from the 15-inch guns of the powerful Bismarck. The Bismarck had accurately located the Hood with radar equipment, the first reported successful use of radar in such a naval operation in the war. It is said that the Hood had likewise detected the presence of a ship at the spot where the Bismarck was, but knowing that a number of friendly warships were in the vicinity, did not dare to take the chance of attacking first.

Many improvements have been made in radar which are not as yet ready for the public eye and all those familiar with the subject say the study is only in its infancy. Scientific achievement seems limitless and the one virtue of war is that it spurs inventive genius to great strides of progress.

When peace comes radar will likewise open new vistas of which the layman hardly dreams.

Harry Truman didn't want to be vice president. James Byrnes didn't ask to be made secretary of state. Neither wanted to mix into international affairs—but they found themselves on the same boat en route to Germany.

Jap Line Cut by
One-Man Massacre

American Private Kills 30
In Heroic Attack.

OKINAWA. — Pfc. Clarence B. Craft, Santa Ana, Calif., in a one-man massacre, killed 30 Japs and drove a wedge which his regimental commander said helped snap the Jap Shuri defense line.

Fellow doughboys, who had a ringside seat to "a fighting performance we hardly could believe," told recently how Craft almost single-handedly wiped out a Jap pocket in 10 to 15 minutes.

Craft, married and the father of a four-year-old son, made his one-man assault on a 450-foot hill after elements of the 96th infantry division had been pinned down by intense machine gun fire.

For 10 days Japs from this hill had held up two battalions.

Two tanks of two divisions couldn't move until it was seized.

On May 31 a company and two platoons assaulted the hill again.

Craft went into action. When he reached the hilltop he began tossing grenades into trenches and foxholes as men from his platoon passed them up to him. He straddled a trench, pouring fire from his Garand down into it. Then he jumped in, mowing down Japs as they got to him.

He knocked out a heavy machine gun and its crew as he strode through the trench. He drove the Japs he didn't kill into a hillside cave, then sealed it with a demolition charge.

Fifty-eight Jap bodies, 3 "knee" mortars, 3 machine guns, about 80 rifles and piles of ammunition littered the hill when the fight was over. Craft himself fired five clips of rifle ammunition and threw 48 grenades. He estimated he killed 25 Japs with rifle fire, the remainder with grenades.

Grenades thrown by his buddies, two of whom were wounded, accounted for the other Japs. At one time Japs and Americans were dueling with grenades which sailed over Craft's head.

Radio Helps Close Jaw

Of Fisherman Out at Sea

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The medical officer of an Alaskan coast guard base used remote control to snap into place the jaw of a fisherman which had locked wide open. The fisherman was on a small boat 200 miles at sea.

The coast guard said here that faint signals of distress were picked up by Guy B. Delp, radio operator at the remote Alaskan base, who informed Lt. (j. g.) Harry F. Kaack, Clinton, Iowa, of the emergency.

Dr. Kaack placed Executive Officer Lt. (j. g.) Edward Nugent of Bad Axe, Mich., before the radio operator and went through the manipulations of resetting the jaw.

Delp tapped out a description of each motion to the receiver on the fishing boat and the word soon came back: "Instructions carried out. Man now O. K."

Holds Back Tears
While She Dances

Promise of Dead Brother
Made Good by Buddies.

MACON, GA. — Holding back the tears, a brotherless "kid sister" swirled to dance music in a gown of white—"the prettiest in town"—just as her brother who died on Iwo Jima promised she would.

It was Miss Frances Newman's 18th birthday.

Buddies of her brother in the tough 4th marines division provided her with the beautiful evening gown she wore to her birthday dance, arranged by her co-workers at Warner Robins field near here. The division commander, Maj. Gen. Clifton B. Cates, sent orchids.

"I miss Bob terribly," said the tall, earnest young girl. "But I'll dance and have a good time—just as we had planned. I know he'd want me to."

The brother, 26-year-old Sgt. James R. (Bob) Newman of Lumpkin, Ga., had promised his "kid sister" long ago he'd get her orchids and the "prettiest evening gown I can find" for her 18th birthday and take her to a dance.

But Bob was killed by a Japanese shell February 22.

After he was killed, Frances wrote General Cates, telling him she was going to keep her chin up "because if Bob had to die, he would have wanted to die a marine." Her note also told of her and Bob's plans for her 18th birthday. Cates said the letter was the most beautiful he'd ever received.

When the dress came, there was a "Happy Birthday" card with it. It was signed "Bob's Buddies."

Throttle Shot Off, Pilot

Crash-Lands His Bomber

CHICAGO — A Yank who saw plenty of action but "didn't get a scratch," is Lt. William H. Carl, 25, of 2506 N. Mozart street, a combat navigator—bomber pilot with the 9th air force.

In support of ground troops in a raid on Sauerbraten, Germany, his precision bombing with radar equipment helped take the town with negligible losses. On his return from the mission, his plane made a crash landing at 250 miles an hour, as flak had shot off the right throttle at full power and the pilot couldn't cut the engine.

During an attack on the Ruhr valley, his B-26 was jumped by enemy fighters. Three of the gunners were wounded, the hydraulics and air speed meter was knocked out, and the plane had over 300 bullet holes in the fuselage. The ship caught fire when they crash landed at Eindhoven, Holland. Carl wears the DFC, the air medal with 10 clusters and 5 campaign stars.

Red Raskall

By CLARK McMEEKIN

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lark Shannon, whose horse, Madoc, was sold to clear a debt when her father died, sails from England for America. David North, whom she loves, was to make the trip with her, but disappoints her by sailing the night before. When in sight of the Virginia coast the ship encounters a violent storm. Lark manages to get into a lifeboat, but it is swamped. She grabs a spar and when she awakens feels solid ground beneath her. After recovering her strength, she sees Lancer, the Red Raskall, a fine horse who escaped from the ship, sinking in quicksand. With the spar that saved her she saves him. The next day Galt Withe, a bound servant, discovers her on the island.

CHAPTER VII

"You be alone," he said. "You told me that fella North ain't this side the water, and the Hastings woman likely don't know you're coming. Who's going to look for you if you can't get away from the inn? Won't it be taken for a fact you drowned on the Tempora?"

"Why in the world would they want to keep me at the inn?"

"I could tell you," Galt said unhappily. "Lot o' rough uns coming to the inn, time to time. I—just don't aim to take you there. That's an end to it. I aim to go now, and come back for you and make for Horntown after dark, to-night."

"Suppose you don't get to the mainland, now?"

Galt looked at the placid sky and dancing water. "Why?"

"It could storm—you could drown."

"That be fool'sh," He turned back to the dinghy. "I can tell you this. I will come back for you. And if I'd been your fine David North, I wouldn't on no account missed that Tempora barkentine. I wouldn't of sent a note, I'd have been there."

Lark said scornfully, ragingly, "You—you . . . you're not fit to polish the boots of a man like David North. You're—"

"I ain't studying 'bout polishing his boots," Galt pushed the dinghy loose from the wet clinging beach. "I just said truth. I'd have been there. I'll be here tonight."

"Ponies," Galt dropped down at once, out of sight against the side of the boat. "Lie flat, Lark."

"They land at the point," Lark said indifferently. "I've seen them do it time and again, since I've been here. There's some soft grass in the valley they like." Galt nodded, watching.

And then the indifference, the hopelessness was washed from Lark because she saw the lead horse, the big red-brown stallion, rising from the water, finding his footing on the rocky point, standing there in the marsh grass, wet, gleaming, magnificent, dwarfing the ponies that swarmed up about him.

"That's Red Raskall!" She barely made the words. "Look, Galt! That's the horse I told you about. He's come back. . . . If we could only—Don't you move! I think he sees us!"

"If he was but the stallion named Lancer," Galt said excitedly, "and we could but snare him, Squire Terraine would give a hundred pound reward for him. So I heard him say, and that's what his posted reward offers. I read it. A special reward."

He brought a coil of tarred rope, from under the prow seat of the dinghy, and handed it to Lark. "See can you fashion a halter, while I creep to the ridge top. If we could get a hand on, we'd have to have a way to hold him, and I don't like to noose him. Too much chance he'll choke himself. I've seen many a pony do that. They be wilder than lions."

He looked back and beckoned and she followed, conscious of the rustling noise of her salt-crusted skirts, afraid she might cough or sneeze, tense with hope and excitement.

Red Raskall was grazing a little beyond the herd, and Galt and Lark slipped back down the ridge to the beach and ran along quietly, swiftly, until Galt said they must be about opposite the horse now, if he hadn't moved too much.

"Does he get back in the midst of 'em," he said breathlessly, "we'll never get near him."

They eased back up the ridge, and Lark, raising her cautious head to look over its top, was electrified to see him just beyond them, just a bare few feet away, there. . . .

"Galt—let me try!" Lark laid the rope halter down. "I'm sure he'll know me. I believe I can—"

She crept from the shelter of the scrub growth, down the steep and sandy ridge side, on her knees. The horse was facing upwind. . . . With enormous care and caution Lark began to stand up. She could almost reach out and touch him. . . . Softly, all but soundlessly, she whistled, soothingly, coaxingly. She spoke his name, "Whoa, Lancer, whoa, boy, easy, Red Raskall. . . ."

Lancer wheeled, stopped, stood for a poised instant, watching Lark. His lip curled back and he stamped, looking toward the startled ponies now, his tail flicking like a snapping whip. Lark walked toward him. She closed the little space with her leisurely steps, talking to him. He stepped backward edgily, making the whimpering sound again, his eyes rolling white and unsure. . . .

Her hand was on his neck, the base of his beautiful red-brown neck. She was knotting her fingers in the tough short mane where it began. He sidled away from her, ears back, shaking his head, stamping out furiously now with his nervous hoofs.

Lark, her hand hard and firm on his neck, made a springing leap from the ground, scrambling for a seat on his back, for a kneehold about that slim quick red-brown barrel. It was her skirts that hampered her, her awkward billowing stiffish skirts. Almost, she was secure, gripping with knees that were cramped from the crawling and waiting. Red Raskall reared before she was ready, reared and came down like a catapult, head low now, legs stiff for the jarring impact, and Lark knew she'd lost him, knew her seat wasn't firm and right, knew it, and went rolling headlong into the sand rattle of the ridge base.

But even as she knew it, even as she sobbed in the sickening disappointment of the fall, she saw Galt spring for the horse, spring from the ridge where he'd lain hidden, spring and throw a long, sure sinewy leg over the plunging horse's shoulders, bend close along the neck, lace strong bare arms around Red Raskall's neck, and then the rider and horse were out of sight over the ridge top, and she heard the slither of hoofs in the downward rush for the beach, heard the splash and echo of a heavy body striking water. . . .

Lark raced for the ridge top and saw Galt, still on the Raskall's back, far out in the water now. He was trying to urge the horse back towards the shore, turning him with knee-pressure, talking to him, his arms hugging the stallion's neck. . . . And then Red Raskall was floundering, turning, coming back now, slipping on the shells and pebbles, coming up, quivering, a hundred yards up-island in an outgrowth of thick marsh reeds.

Red Raskall reared before she was ready.

"Galt—how did you do it? Galt—that was unbelievable!"

Lark watched the dinghy with her ill-made sail-rag, get her back to the breeze and scud for the western land smudge. After a while it took on grace and a certain beauty. The strange wild-haired young fellow sailing her was straight and beautiful too, now.

Distance was kind to his disreputable clothes, the old white scars, his matted hair, and tragic eyes. It pointed up the long clean lines of him, his ease and sureness as the dinghy bobbed and shivered, dissolving finally in a dancing shadow, a point, nothingness. . . .

With the sudden fear that Red Raskall was gone, Lark hurried through the ridge break and saw that he was there, hitching his head up and down, trying to shake off the hobble and halter.

It was almost twilight when she saw a boat coming from the direction of the mainland. It was bigger than the dinghy of the morning. It looked like the small fishing boats Lark had seen off the Cornish coast, some summer's trip. It was a little yawl with mast, mainsail and jib, and a tiny jigger mast stepped far astern. It was manned by two strange men, Lark realized now. A thick-set heavy man, with a cap pulled low over his eyes, tended the mainsail and jib. A taller, younger-looking figure, with neat clubbed hair and a white shirt, was at the tiller in the yawl's stern.

Neither of them responded to Lark's waving, but when they came nearer, she saw that the younger one, the man in the fresh white shirt and clean faded sailor's breeches, was Galt.

"I thought you'd never come!" Lark called. "Oh, Galt, I am so glad to see you. You look splendid, Galt—"

She shushed before the look on his face, the guarded, sullen look. The squat heavy man jumped out first, as the boat touched.

He grinned at Lark. He looked her over, curiously.

"Well," he said, his voice thick, muddy, "un be a sweet-meat, proper! Gawd, that popinjay, Galt! That buck, that fop, a-soapin' hisself for who laid the rail! White shirtin' hisself an' a-tellin' he was sailin' out fer oyschers!"

"Un Cony!" Galt said furiously, and the squat man laid a hand on the butt of the pistol hanging from his belt.

"What be un's name, sweet-meat?" Cony walked toward Lark.

He was short and powerfully made, astonishingly hairy, even his long arms covered by a thatch of sun-burned hair that grew from fingers to shoulders. He had broad flat features and ruddy, stubbled skin, that gathered in folds under bulging black eyes. He wore only filthy trousers and a filthy cap.

Over his head Lark's eyes met Galt's despairing ones. He was trying hard to tell her something, some wordless warning.

"I say, 'I lash hell out o' un, Galt, a-keepin' secrets from me.'" Cony laughed enormously, winking at Lark. "Where un come from, sweet-meat? I ain't never seed un Horn-town way."

"I was shipwrecked on the Tempora," Lark said coldly. "I'm Lark Shannon, a minister's daughter, on my way to Mistress Mara Hastings' Dame School in Norfolk, Virginia. And if you dare to lash Galt I'll report you to the authorities there."

"Blast me for a blow-toad, now!" Cony grinned. "How un figure to git to Norfolk, sweetmeat?"

"Stage or carriage. However people usually go."

"Stage or carriage, now! Has un money for stage or carriage?"

"Not here. Of course not! I told you I was shipwrecked. I'll send word to Mr. David North, of the Cargoe Riske Company in Norfolk. He'll be coming from England. He'll send money, or come for me."

"Un be warm spirited," Cony said gravely. "Un say un got Cargoe Riske money to call on, sweetmeat?"

Lark hesitated, saying finally, "Mr. David North of that company is—a friend. He will certainly see I get to Norfolk."

"Galt can write the Cargoe Riske," Cony said, chuckling. "He be a great hand for letters, Galt. How come he have the handsome luck to find un, sweetmeat?"

"I seed her here," Galt said, suddenly. "I seed her an' put in."

Cony snorted, looking interestedly at the dinghy marks and Galt's bare footprints in the sand. Then his eyes followed Galt's and Lark's prints toward the ridge break, beyond which lay the little secret cache of Galt's, and Red Raskall, grazing in the valley. Lark's breath shortened as if she had been running.

"Sure," Cony said. "Then why'n't un come to land with Galt this dawn? My notion is, he told un ugly tales, scarin' un, like. How I see it, be this. Galt had him some good reason to come here, first off. Taint nature to come 'thin f' mile o' old Ghost. Quicksand here, an' a horde o' dead bones, an' a stinkin' undertow second to none. Now why'd he come?"

"He was fishing," The big hoof-prints of Red Raskall were clear, along here, Lark noticed. She tried to hurry.

"What un's haste, sweetmeat?" Cony reached out, pinched her arm gently. "Un ben't weak nor undue thin, bidin' a full week here alone. Maybe un got other friends washed up with un. Maybe un's Mr. David North be round about, fendin' for un."

"You don't believe any castaway would hide out when a rescue boat came, do you? Why don't you search the island?"

His eyes were thoughtful, shrewd. "That ben't a bad idea. Yet I think un tell it true that un be alone. Yet who feed un?"

"A tin of biscuits washed up," Lark said. "I ate them."

His grunt was skeptical. "Un say Galt found un only today?"

"Do you really think I'd have stayed here all this time if I'd been found by Galt or anybody else? Do you?"

"Now, now," Cony gestured her toward the yawl. "Us be gettin' home. Sought to fool me, did un, Galt? Push off now!"

Lark climbed into the boat, sitting as far from Cony as she could. She was thankful that the failing light, and the fact that Red Raskall had come back to land in the thick marsh reeds, had kept Cony from guessing the whole truth, but she was shaken and frightened. The night wind moaned over the island behind them.

"Un be thinkin'," Cony said, as what the Cargoe Riske'll pay for un. Bide un keep clear o' yon Galt. Cony be un's friend. Un look to Cony!"

All the way in, the sick sureness that it had been her hysterical outburst at Galt that had done the damage haunted Lark. She had called him dirty, stupid . . . and he had cleaned up, in a pathetic effort to please her, and so Cony had become suspicious. Lark looked at Galt, surly, despairing, handling the sail mechanically, and she was sick with fear.

TRUMAN COMMITTEE CARRIES ON

Senators Kilgore of West Virginia (Dem.) and Brewster of Maine (Rep.) had an interesting experience while probing conditions in Germany for the Mead committee, formerly the Truman committee. Calling at the headquarters of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, they were received courteously by the general himself, who talked with them for ten minutes, then went off to keep an appointment.

The two senators then proceeded with their usual investigation. Settling down in one of the U. S. military offices, they called in witnesses, and cross-examined them with a stenographer taking down everything that was said.

This continued for nearly three hours. Unlike most visitors, Senators Kilgore and Brewster seemed intent on really finding out what was happening in that part of occupied Germany. Finally, Gen. Arthur White, chief of staff to General Patch, appeared nervously in the background.

"Gentlemen," he said, "ahem . . . this procedure . . . it's a little unusual. I'm not sure that we can permit you to continue."

"It's the same procedure we've always followed," replied Senator Brewster.

"Yes," continued Kilgore, "it's the same procedure followed by this committee under former Chairman Truman."

"You probably recall him," added Brewster, "he's now President of the United States."

Next day General Patch himself invited the two senators to dine with him at the villa which he had taken over from a German princess.

JUDICIAL EXIT

There was a day when everyone in and around the Roosevelt administration wanted to be a judge. This ambition was largely precipitated by the Supreme court fight and the fact that the courts in those days had put several obstructive decisions squarely across the path of the New Deal.

But now it is just the opposite. There is a growing exit from the courts. Judge Schwellenbach has just resigned from the bench to be secretary of labor. Judge Sherman Minton is itching to get off the circuit court of appeals in Chicago. And there will soon be four vacancies on the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, considered one of the most important courts in the country.

Judges Vinson and Thurman Arnold have already made two vacancies on this court. Two other vacancies will occur when Chief Justice Duncan Groner and Judge Justin Miller resign.

It may keep the White House busy looking for good men to take their places.

ITALIAN UNDERGROUND

It is not often that anyone can get a first hand report on the results of psychological warfare direct from his own family in an enemy country. However, Ugo Carusi, director of immigration and naturalization, has had that experience.

Carusi came to this country as a small boy from the marble quarries of northern Italy, went to work in the marble quarries of Vermont, and got to know Harlan F. Stone, who brought him to the justice department when Stone became attorney general under Coolidge.

And during the war, Carusi has been broadcasting to the Italian people urging them to surrender. With the end of the war, Carusi has received letters from his relatives in Italy telling how his broadcasts helped inspire the battle against the Nazis.

"Ugo," wrote a cousin, "you can really be proud of your relatives here in Italy. From the oldest down to that little, charming young lady (Carusi's 10-year-old niece) you were always so happy to hold in your lap while in Carrara, they have proven themselves to be great patriots."

"One of your cousins, the brother of Enrico, was the colonel who led a Partigiani band in the capture of Carrara from the Germans last November. From that time on, the Partigiani controlled all the public offices in the town. The caves with which you are familiar were used to good advantage by the Partigiani, and the Nazis refrained from re-entering the city."

WAR NOTES

Despite the heavy bombing of the Schweinfurt ball-bearing plant, inside sources reveal that it is in reasonably good condition and within one month could be producing 50 per cent of its wartime schedule. . . . The Nazis had removed a lot of Schweinfurt's intricate machinery before the air raids, and hidden it. The manager of the plant told U. S. officials that within three or four months he could be turning out 20 per cent more ball-bearings than during the war.

LESKE-WRIGHT

Fort Sam Houston was the scene of the marriage Thursday evening of Miss Dorothy Ann Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Wright of San Antonio, and Lt. Alvin C. Leske, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin C. Leske, also of that city. Chaplain Felix Durant officiated.

Mrs. C. H. Quinn sang the nuptial selections accompanied by Sgt. R. V. Burke at the organ.

The bride wore a wedding gown of porcelain white net. The square neckline and long pointed sleeves were trimmed with ruffles of net and alencon. Matching ruffles edged the fully gathered skirt which extended into a cathedral length train. She wore a finger-tip veil of bridal illusion and carried white orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Maude Nipper of Brackettville was the maid of honor, and Mrs. W. B. Bellamy, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor.

Lt. W. B. Bellamy served as best man. Lt. Fred Risinger, Jr., was the groomsmen.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Fort Sam Houston Officers' Club. Miss Frances Thomas was in charge of the bride's book. Mes. Ames A. C. Spencer, Joe Williams and Fred Huber assisted in serving.

Lt. and Mrs. Leske will make their home in North Carolina while he is stationed at Fort Bragg.

Lt. Leske is a grandson of the late August Kempf and wife, lifelong citizens of Medina County.

Pfc. and Mrs. Billy Edward Stiefer announce the arrival of Patricia Ann, weighing 9 pounds, at the Medina Hospital, Sunday, July 22, 1945. Pvt. Stiefer has been overseas since February serving with the Air Transport Command in India. Mrs. Stiefer is the former Isabel Karm of Castoville. Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Stiefer of Hawkins are the paternal grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. Dru Miller and daughter of San Antonio visited Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Miller and other relatives and friends here last weekend.

Mrs. Charles Rogers and children of San Antonio are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Huegele.

Glenn R. Miller, seaman second class, USNR, of 4124 Paxton St., Hondo, Texas, fought aboard the USS Colorado for 60 days and nights at Okinawa, according to a release from the Fleet Home Town News Center, Chicago, Ill. The Colorado expended there more ammunition in support of ground troops than in any of the previous occupation support and bombardment operations in which she participated. The ship took up her station off the beaches seven days before the invasion to help in the softening-up bombardment, and then for 60 days she continued her relentless pounding of enemy positions. She helped beat off numerous air attacks that were launched against units of the Fleet operating in the area.

New and renewal subscriptions received since last week include the following from: Mrs. Max Witcher, Dilley; Mrs. Thomas Keahey, San Antonio; Chas. Krenmueller, Dunlay; Mrs. Alex L. Haby, Hondo; Mrs. O. S. Secrist, Rockford, Ohio; Milton Haegelin, San Diego, Calif.; Elbert de Montel (new), Denver, Colo.; Henry C. Buss, S. T. M. 3-c (new), Brooklyn, N. Y.; 1st Lt. Annie F. EDWIN B. VANCE RITES HELD

Funeral services were held Tuesday, July 17, at 4 p. m. for Edwin Antonio hospital.

He is survived by five daughters,

state, automatically dissolves the Society, which has operated since 1901, and following payment of his beneficiaries, the funds of the Society will be prorated among the 86 members and the organization will cease to exist.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Tires which were introduced to the public eighteen months before Pearl Harbor, to waken the nation to the necessity of mass production of synthetic rubber, were created after fourteen years of intensive research in synthetic rubber by B. F. Goodrich.

The Japs are reported to have reversed the process for making rubber out of oil and are making gasoline and oil out of natural rubber.

One of the largest tire repair shops overseas, operated by the Ordnance Tire Repair Company in Italy, turns out 534 repaired and recapped tires per day.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING MYSTERY

WASHINGTON. — No secret meetings with the military were held by the Woodrum house committee which urged what it called "a broad policy of universal military training."

No special information concerning difficulties ahead of this nation was privately passed to the committee by the war department which has been promoting the youth draft. Specifically, no inside scare over Russia inspired the committee.

Consequently, considerable perplexity has developed as to how and why it went contrary to the weight of evidence in its own hearings.

It seemed to vote 16 to 0 in favor of a program which none of its hearing witnesses endorsed, except the army, navy, state departments and the U. S. chamber of commerce, against the popular opposition of national educational groups, both major national labor organizations, two of the three national farm organizations, as well as the usual peace societies, and women's groups.

To make the mystery more possible, one member of the committee says he has received only two letters from his district in favor of the youth draft, while he has a bushel of mail against it.

When congressmen go 16 to 0 (the remaining six members abstained or wanted to delay action but did not vote against the report directly) in favor of something opposed by their constituents and the most powerful lobbies in Washington—labor, farmer, education, women—a miracle is wrought.

Woodrum's Plan

This one seems to come within the realm of magic—political magic. It should have been entitled "How to Be a Politician in One Easy Lesson." Caught between the army and the lobbies, the committee favored both opposite courses—in moderation, of course.

Committee Chairman Woodrum tossed all the hot potato evidence he had amassed into the air, then caught and came forward with some conglomeration which steamed in the headlines.

Actually it is cold potato salad. His pride in it did not leap even to ordinary bounds as he did not even have it printed in the congressional record which prints all congressional thoughts for the asking.

Upon close inspection you will find the report did not endorse the war department program but was worded to sound as if it did, by approving "the principle" and "the broad policy" yet undefined.

Among members of the Woodrum committee is Rep. James W. Wadsworth of New York, who is supposed to have seen to the wording. He wants to draft all youths of 18 or thereabouts for a year in the army.

Talking around with the committee, you will find many favor a Democratic substitute such as advocated by the Veterans of Foreign Wars for training boys in schools, without interrupting their education, expanding the national guard and reserves systems, and summer camps. The report did not oppose this, excepting it seemed to want the youths drafted for it.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars program, following the lines outlined in this column since last September, now rates the best chance of adoption by congress in the end—with-out a draft—but only after more magic and semantics. Next will come a report from the house military affairs committee and this may recommend drafting, as the military totalitarians are in the majority.

Home Compulsion!

But on the floor of the senate and house today, a majority for a youth draft would be hard to find. Compulsion for home and school training without a national draft is the obvious compromise.

The army has never come forward with a specific outline of what it intended to do with the young men if it gets control of them for a year (no one mentions the young women any more and I assume they have been dropped from the army training program.)

But retired officers who are going around the country whipping up sentiment in American Legion posts advocate something like this:

Nine weeks' basic training (bunk-making, setting-up exercises, etc.); 9 weeks of specialists training in 4,000 categories in the army.

Eisenhower really proved there must be a citizens' training system, and urged that the training promote co-ordination between the land, sea and air forces. But like Marshall he did not even consider enlarging the national guard, youth camps for summer only, creation of a larger and better officer reserve system, quadrupling West Point and Annapolis, injection of military courses in high schools and colleges as compulsory subjects—or any of the other many excellent alternatives to the youth draft system, founded by Prussians and adopted by Nazis.

Traditional Wedding Gowns Are Demanded by Modern Brides

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WEDDINGS galore! That's what's happening now that so many of our servicemen are returning to those they hold dear. The season of the year no longer has anything to do with the case. One of the reactions to the war is that weddings come up in any month. In fact, they have become year-round events.

This year with the return of thousands and thousands of eligibles, wedding bells will be ringing more frequently than ever. Designers are outdoing themselves in creating just one lovely gown after another for brides-to-be who want to say "I do" in a wedding dress that lives up to tradition.

Some of the dresses are in rich satin, traditionally trained and lace-trimmed. Others are charmingly fashioned with fitted basque waists and very full skirts in such sheer, cloudlike fabrics as nylon, mouseline de soie, net, marquisette or organza. There are also combinations of lace and net, satin and net, or chiffon and lace.

Several designers are featuring rumba ruffles starting at the waistline and extending to short full trains. There is lots of back interest, too, either in skirt fullness or in bustle bows. Peplums and apron effects vary the skirt treatments in front. Off-shoulder bodices and bertha necklines add a picturesque note to a number of dresses of the heirloom type. The favored head-dress these days is the very full fingertip veil of fine net or tulle, falling from a little circlet or bonnet or pancake beret of fluted net.

The illustration herewith brings you a preview of just such gowns as you will see parading down the center aisles in endless procession, for weddings are scheduled to take place in record number this year. Lovely beyond words is the very youthful-looking bridal dress of sheerest dotted net shown to the left in the picture. In this bewitching little frock, so frilly and ruffy and sheer, so refreshingly naive in its simplicity and girlish charm, not only the groom but each and every guest will have fallen in love with this winsome bride. A much beruffled bertha falls bewitchingly over her shoulders. The simple head-dress she wears is of artfully arranged plain net.

Traditional satin of choicest weave fashions the stately gown centered in the group. It carries out formality to perfection. The fine seed pearl embroidery that enhances the bodice is also repeated around the neck to encircle a throat-high yoke of transparent net.

The very young bride or the bride with the small "teen-timer" figure will go for the picturesque gown to the right, made of an indescribably fine net. The bodice pleating is set on a flesh-colored yoke giving an enchanting off-shoulder effect. The pleatings on the skirt are applied with exceeding grace to carry on about the short and full train. This portrait gown will be effective made up of mouseline de soie or fine nylon or soft and sheer voile.

For the bride who plans a mid-season wedding, a gown as effective as the traditional white satin is fashioned of an all-over eyeleted white cotton sheer. This could be easily made by the bride-to-be who can sew. Let the bodice be of the fitted type, prettified with a sweetheart neckline. Make the skirt gathered slightly into the waistline but cut on a circular movement that develops into a long train that will billow out behind with infinite grace as the wedding cortege moves down the aisle.

Cotton Pique Suit

We are hearing so much about suits that are made of de luxe cottons in dark colors as being top fashion for summer and early autumn wear. Here is just such a suit, and it is made of green and white check pique. White pique cuffs, collar facing and a novel button-back jacket-edge treatment add excitement. This stunning two-piece by Helen Morgan makes a perfect going-away costume for the midsummer or early fall bride.

Wide Brimmed Hats With Sheer Frocks

That bulky look you see in many of the lovely white summer dressy hats is a myth. That is, they are not clumsy or heavy in the least. It's that they are lavished with billowy masses of net and tulle and veiling about their wide brims until sometimes they look almost top-heavy, but really these airy-fairy confections are light as a feather. The hat of the moment to wear with one's dressy summer prints and pretty-pretty black sheer frocks is the wide-brimmed black straw; the wider the brim the smarter. An interesting feature about these black beauties is that more often than not the brims are made to look dressy with fluted edges of lace or black net or they may take on big ruchings of black sheer. Sometimes the brims themselves are a structure of vapory black tulle and lace manipulated on a wire foundation. Be the hat a simple straw, a fine Milan or a much manipulated brim with sheer lace effect, the fact remains that the large black hat is a fashion favorite this summer.

Hats Styled for Up Hairdo Come as Welcome News

Women who have been having difficulty in fitting hats over the topknot hairdo will welcome the news that crownless hats are now being made that hook or snap around the bun or the cluster of curls atop milady's head. These can be adjusted for a perfect fit. Sometimes a tall ruche of black or white sheer on the hat surrounds the topknot giving every appearance of a crown but the top is actually left open to accommodate the hair arrangement.

WHEN Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves passed Rogers Hornsby's consecutive hitting record of 33 games, the time seemed to be about right for your correspondent to look up a few notable records that might last for generations.

One of these is Joe DiMaggio's consecutive hitting record for both leagues that totaled 56 contests. This took place in 1941. DiMaggio began collecting base hits on May 15 and finally ceased firing on the 16th of July.

Any record can be beaten, but this will be a tough one to crack. There are two other almost phantom targets that may never be surpassed. One is Lou Gehrig's consecutive game record that carried on for a matter of 14 years and more than 2,000 contests. It will take a stronger combination of steel and concrete than we have ever seen so far in one human system to pass Lou Gehrig's mark. This must stand among the incredible features of sport.

Lou began his long march in 1925 and finally came to the end of his career in 1939. The second untouchable mark belongs to Babe Ruth and his count of 60 home runs, piled up in 1927.

There is another pretty fair ball player by the name of Tyrus Raymond Cobb who has to his credit a different set of figures that no one now living will ever see equaled. This record includes a lifetime total of 2,244 runs and 4,191 hits.

Jimmy Foxx and Hank Greenberg almost caught up with Ruth's home run accumulation of 60 in a season, but no other ball player has even come close to Cobb's double mark. This same record also includes 892 stolen bases, well beyond Eddie Collins' turn of 744.

Cobb, Ruth and Gehrig, all American Leaguers, complete the trio that offers the toughest targets on the batting side of the game. And when you mention the two greatest ball players of all time, Cobb and Ruth draw most of the votes although Hans Wagner still has a stout following that refuses to be shaken loose. Mel Ott is the most redoubtable of the National League record holders at bat—and Mel is still under-way and increasing his lead. Mel sets a record of some sort every time he gets another hit or steps into another home run—insofar as the National League is concerned.

Stand-Out Pitchers

Walter Johnson, another American Leaguer, is the pitcher that stands out as the main all-time target to knock over. But for all that even Old Barney isn't so far in front of Cy Young. In fact, looking a trifle deeper into the matter, Young's mark may outlive all others. It consists largely of these figures—games pitched—906, games won—510. When you figure that Walter Johnson is in second place, 97 winning games away at 413, you get a better idea of Cy's miraculous contribution to the art of piling up victories.

One of Johnson's top marks is the count of 56 consecutive scoreless innings, compiled in 1913. That means something better than six straight shutouts. For a career run Johnson also sets up two other targets with 3,497 strikeouts and 113 shutouts, 23 beyond Grover Alexander's total.

But Old Pete must be drawn into this select society with the pitching he offered in 1916. That season, working in Philadelphia's ballpark, where a looping fly was usually a homer, Alexander turned in 16 shutouts—more shutouts in one season than most pitchers can call winning games.

The two marks of 19 consecutive victories established by Tim Lincecum and Rube Marquard of the Giants, form another elusive target that many have fired at through the years in vain.

There was no record ever set that can't be broken. But those referred to in these brief dispatches are something more than records. They are landmarks. Even peering into the future, what batter is there to pile up 4,191 base hits? Or what pitcher can ever hope to win 510 games? Or what iron man can outlast Gehrig's 14 seasons of consecutive play? These are the three toughest of them all to shatter or drive away from the record pages. For all three call not only for extreme skill but also for the amazing stamina that few ever possess.

Eisenhower, Ball Player

Dear Grant—I just checked over an old Reach Guide, 1910, and found this concerning a player by the name of Wilson, General Eisenhower's alias while playing with Abilene in the Central Kansas League, season of 1909.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

By VIRGINIA VALE

PARAMOUNT'S studio press bureau reported an unusual number of requests from servicemen to visit the Betty Hutton-Sonny Tufts sets for "Cross My Heart." They couldn't figure out the reason for that avalanche of requests, till some bright boy came up with the answer. Seems that somebody had announced in print that Betty had posed for photographs on the set with two air corps lieutenants, Robert Drew and Bruce Shaw, P-38 pilots stationed at nearby Van Nuys—and Betty had sat on one officer's lap while the cameras clicked!

It all turned out perfectly. A publicity man introduced Nancy Norman, pretty singer with Sammy Kaye's orchestra, and Dick Brown, who's featured on his own Sunday MBS program; the press agent's object, a "romance item" that he could send to radio editors (who get awfully sick of those same phoney "romances"). But — this time it worked differently; Nancy and Dick will be married in September, when his brother comes home from the South Pacific. The same thing happened when that same publicity man introduced Patti Pickens of the Pickens Sisters and tenor Robert Simmons, also for publicity purposes. They've been married four years.

Newspaper columnists get lots of "no-romance" items. The latest concerns Elizabeth Scott, making her screen debut in Hal Wallis' "You Came Along." There'll be no romantic interest for her, we're told, till her film career is definitely established. Announcements like this usually backfire—just let a gal say she won't fall in love, and next thing you know, she's eloping with somebody.

Helen Mack, who's producer of NBC's "Date with Judy" and the new "Beulah Show," gets no vacation this summer. In addition to handling the direction of the two network shows Helen has been signed for two movie roles—enough to keep any woman busy.

Ted Malone wants you to help him. He's keeping a promise made to his G.I. friends overseas by dedicating his broadcast series, heard week days over the American network, to rediscovering America. He wants mail on "What War Has Done to Your Community."

Alfred Hitchcock, who recently completed "Spellbound" and is now preparing "Notorious" for David O. Selznick, is about to send some of his spine-chilling yarns over the airways. "Too many mystery programs come on the air asking people to turn out the lights, lock the doors, and prepare to be frightened to death," says he, "when actually nothing takes place that would scare anybody. When my program comes on, it will probably be a failure. While listening, the audience will become so frightened they likely will turn it off."

David O. Selznick, who developed Ingrid Bergman into a star, again has gone to Stockholm for his latest "find." He's Frank Sundstrom, star of the same Royal Dramatic theater in which Miss Bergman studied, and has appeared in eight European films.

Members of the "Duel in the Sun" company who have been on location, have organized the first Cactus and Iodine club. All members who have been stuck by Arizona's Cholla cactus are eligible; Jennifer Jones' make-up woman, Clare Kaufman, is a charter member; she sat on one!

ODDS AND ENDS—Ginny Simms has a special "hospital dress," a bright flowered print, which she wears when she sings to wounded soldiers; the boys in the words like it. . . . Working 16 hours a day, 7 days a week, Conrad Nagel, director of the air "Silver Theater," earned $7.50 per week when he started his career as an actor. . . . Bonita Granville, who'll portray a smart lawyer in her role in "The Lie Detector," is just 22; she's been an actress since she was three. . . . Arthur Lake of the "Blondie" series thinks maybe he should be insulted—a goat, mascot-stablemate of a famous racehorse, has been named "Dagwood," for him!

Variations on a Theme

I have often thought that most of us would be better cooks if we learned to make a few dishes well instead of gathering hundreds of recipes without ever learning how to do any one of them well enough to set in front of company. Then, if these few dishes get monotonous, there are always good variations to use to make them seem entirely different than the basic recipe.

One woman whom I know frankly admits that the only dessert which she can be certain of turning out "right and proper" is a bavarian cream. But is it monotonous to have bavarian cream whenever we go to have dinner with her? No, indeed. Sometimes it turns out to be maple flavored, garnished with pecan nuts. Another time she will cleverly flavor it with chocolate and coffee, a most intriguing combination. Then during the fruit season, she has a spree by adding delicious combinations like pineapple and apricots.

Basic Bavarian Cream. (Serves 6)

1 envelope plain, unflavored gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup thin cream
2 egg whites

Soften gelatin in cold water. Scald milk in top part of double boiler, then gradually add the combined egg yolks, sugar and salt. Return to the double boiler and cook until custard-like in consistency. Remove from heat, add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add vanilla and cream. Chill, and when mixture begins to thicken, beat until fluffy with rotary egg beater. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Pour into mold or molds that have been rinsed in cold water. Chill until firm. When ready to serve, unmold and garnish as desired.

Bavarian Cream Variations.

Maple Bavarian: Make above recipe using shaved maple sugar in place of white sugar. One dozen cut marshmallows may be added or 1/2 cup chopped pecans or walnuts.

Butterscotch: Omit white sugar. Cook 1/4 cup brown sugar with 2 tablespoons butter and add this to hot custard.

Chocolate Rice: Beat 3 tablespoons cocoa into 1 cup cooked rice and fold into bavarian mixture.

Fruit Bavarian: Fold 1 cup diced fruit into bavarian cream after it starts to thicken.

Chocolate Bavarian: Add 2 squares melted, unsweetened chocolate or 6 tablespoons cocoa to scalded milk. Continue as directed. If a slight flavor of coffee is desired with the chocolate, substitute 1 tablespoon cold, boiled coffee for 1 tablespoon of the milk.

Coffee Bavarian: Substitute 1/2 cup cold, boiled coffee for 1/2 cup milk and add 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Ice cream comes in for many

Lynn Says

How to make good pastry: The proper proportion for pastry is 1 cup flour, salt to taste and 1/2 cup shortening or substitute.

The important points are: have ingredients as cold as possible; never over-mix shortening and flour. The mixture should be "lumpy," about the size of giant peas.

When the shortening is not thoroughly mixed with the flour, it "streaks" and makes for flakier crust.

Too much water makes the pastry a "toughie." Use just enough to make the dough stick together. On damp days, less water is required, on sunny days, more.

delicious variations, too, if you have a good basic recipe:

Custard Base Ice Cream.

2 cups milk
2/3 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 eggs
1 cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

Scald 1 1/2 cups milk and add all but 2 tablespoons of the sugar to it. Add cornstarch and salt to remaining 1/2 cup milk. Add to milk which has been heated in top part of double boiler, stirring occasionally. Beat 3 egg yolks and 1 white, add the hot custard and return to double boiler to cook for 5 minutes. Chill. Beat 2 egg whites with the remaining sugar until stiff and add to chilled custard with vanilla. Finally add cream which has been beaten until thick but not stiff. Freeze without stirring.

Ice Cream Variations.

Banana: Crush three bananas through potato ricer, adding 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Add to custard before adding egg white.

Caramel: Heat the sugar of the above recipe in heavy skillet stirring until melted and light brown in color. Add 1/4 cup water and stir until smooth. Cook the cornstarch with the milk and salt and add the caramel plus 1 tablespoon of sugar. Proceed as directed above.

Chocolate: Melt 1 1/2 to 2 tablespoons of chocolate over hot water adding to custard while hot.

Coffee: Scald 1/2 cup finely ground coffee in the milk, then strain through three thicknesses of cheesecloth. Proceed as above, adding 1/2 teaspoon almond flavoring.

Mint: Add 1/4 teaspoon mint extract for vanilla. Tint the ice cream a delicate green. Or, if mint extract is not available, melt 1 cup crushed or ground mints in milk. Tint pink or green, as desired.

Peach: Add 1 cup crushed peaches, 1/2 cup sugar and 1/4 teaspoon almond extract. Omit vanilla.

Now we come to an interesting variation in the meat department. When you want to dress up pork chops for company, here are two excellent suggestions. They are stuffed to stretch the meat.

Pork Chops I.

6 thick pork chops (cut pocket alongside bone)
2 cups toasted bread cubes
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons parsley
4 tablespoons fat
1 can tomato soup

Stuff pork chops with toasted bread cubes and parsley. Pin together with a toothpick. Sear chops on both sides in skillet. Season with salt and pepper, add tomato soup, cover and cook over low heat for 45 to 60 minutes.

Pork Chops II.

6 thick pork chops, cut for stuffing
1 1/2 cups cooked rice
2 pimientos, shredded
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons lard or substitute Stuff pork chops with a well seasoned mixture of rice and pimientos. Pin with toothpick. Sear chops until golden brown. Season with salt and pepper, and add 1/2 cup water, cover tightly, and cook until tender.

1945 RESTAURANT INTERLUDE

Customer—May I see a menu?
Waiter (lazily) — Yesterday's, today's, or tomorrow's?

Customer—Today's, I think.
Waiter—Yesterday's will be just as useful. And tomorrow's will do you as much good.

Customer—I still think I'll take my chances on today's.

Waiter—Oh, be a sport and take yesterday's.

Customer — What makes ordering from yesterday's menu more sporting than from today's?

Waiter—You go back further for what you can't get.

Customer — Gimme today's! And I want one with the scratches!

(The waiter hands him a menu, through which pencil has been heavily drawn.)

Customer (reading the scratches) —Hamburger . . . lamb chop . . . chicken with noodles . . . broiled mackerel . . . ham and eggs . . . corned beef and cabbage . . . frankfurters and beans! Hmmm! Well, I'll try some hash.

Waiter—That's not running today either.

Customer—It's still listed.

Waiter—Yeah. That's a post-time scratch.

Customer (after further study) — How is the liver?

Waiter (surprised) — Is that on there? The chef told me we didn't have it.

Customer—Why wasn't it marked out?

Waiter—It was coupled with the ham and eggs and I guess the boss thought that when you scratched one you scratched the other.

Customer — I'll try the codfish cakes and beans.

Waiter (returning after 10 minutes)—No codfish and beans.

Customer—Well, just bring me the codfish and forget the beans.

Waiter—It's the codfish we ain't got; the beans are still an outside possibility.

Customer—How's the chicken salad?

Waiter—It's O.K. if you like celery and lettuce leaves. Maybe you would like griddle cakes and sausage, if we have any sausage.

Customer — Personally I prefer sausage in cases where you haven't any griddle cakes.

Waiter (impatiently) — How about honeycomb tripe?

Customer—Can I get that today?
Waiter—I can put you on our waiting list.

What, oh, what is that cry rising Where the Nazis used to strut . . . "Germany gives solemn warning," "I will lick the world!"? Tut! Tut! From the Nuremberg inclosure Comes no Fuehrer's frenzied call; Just a roar from grinning doughboys And the stirring yell, "Play ball!"

Once "Der Fatherland is marching To new glories" filled the air, With "I promise greater triumphs" And "With me the world you'll share!"

Now a corporal from Bronxville Sits where Adolf loved to pose And yells "Pickle one for popper! Sock that next one on the nose!"

Gone are all the smart goose-steppers

The World, the Peace and Andy Gribbin

An important thing about Andy Gribbin's education is that his whole early life is spent in learning the essential business of co-operation, of getting along with fellow-beings.

First, he has to learn how to fit into his immediate family, learn the give-and-take necessary to get along with brothers, sisters, elders.

Then, after a few years, his world enlarges, he is sent to school. Pretty soon he learns how to spell C-A-T. But about this same time he learns something much more valuable, which is that he mustn't pull the cat's tail because a cat is a being, and therefore entitled to certain inalienable rights.

He also learns that 1 plus 1 equals 2. But much more useful is learning that 48 equals 1, that 48 states make 1 nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

As Andy grows up his world will continually expand. At church, at school, in business. And through it all will run the theme of cooperation, of getting along with people of different religious, political and economic beliefs; with people some of whom he doesn't even like.

But—the tragedy of world history is that the Andy Gribbins have not learned that in a constantly shrinking world, co-operation must extend beyond the borders of the country; that just as it is necessary to get along with neighbors and neighbor states, so it is necessary to get along with neighbor nations.

And today, with no spot on earth more than sixty hours away by plane, with oceans shrunk to the width of rivers, with the age of rocket-travel upon us, all nations are neighbor nations.

There are hopeful signs that finally we are awake to this.

Even so, a lack of determination, of responsibility, of effort could again ruin the peace and set the stage for World War 3.

What can you do to help make sure that war will never come? You can . . .

First, get and keep yourself informed about the specific proposals for peace and international cooperation which are now before us.

Second, interest your friends in these questions. Get them discussed in groups to which you belong.

Third, write what you think to your Congressman and Senators, to your newspaper. Declare yourself.

CARE OF BABY'S HEALTH

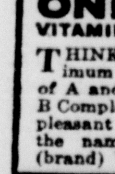

Milk is an infant's natural food;
nevertheless, milk plus heat, dirt and flies has killed many thousands of babies. The intestinal diseases that attack babies in summer are, according to Dr. George W. Cox, State Health Officer, largely caused by germs carried in milk and water.
Unclean or contaminated water can be as harmful in causing infant diarrhea as contaminated milk.

Thousands of babies grow and keep well every year in Texas because they are given the right kind of care and the proper attention is given to the preparation of their food. The right kind of care includes keeping in close touch with the baby's doctor at all times; a regular daily schedule for sleeping, feeding and bathing; sufficient time in the outdoor air, and carefully supervised exposure to sunshine—all these precautions can be important factors in keeping the baby well at all seasons of the year. In addition to benefiting the baby, this type routine allows the mother more for her household duties and re-needed rest periods.

"The baby should wear a mu-mum of clothing and should be dressed as little as possible," Dr. Cox said. "A smooth, flat comforter bed for the baby with no pillow with plenty of fresh air will him to sleep and rest."
The State Health Officer emphasized the importance of keeping baby constantly protected from mosquitoes, and other insects which may transmit diseases. Dr. Cox said that pamphlets outlining the procedure of the baby may be had upon request to local health departments and the State Health Department.
